"PANCHO'S GIFT"

It was one of those parties where fifty would be a comfortable number a hundred and fifty showed up. Its purpose was to entertain but I could find nothing entertaining about bumping elbows and exchanging apologies with a hundred and forty-nine other people. It was then not by chance that I happened to stroll out to the veranda. It was by chance, however, that I heard a certain young woman of some social standing say to a young man of somewhat the same caliber, "Who was the most interesting person you ever met?"

Although the question was not directed at me, I immediately answered out loud, "Pancho Sanchez". She gave me a strange look for a moment then smiled and continued with her conversation. But the question had caught me quite off balance and it had seemed like the words just spurted out of me at the time. For truly Pancho Sanchez was the most interesting and the most striking person I have ever met. Pancho had a talent—a very rare talent it was: that of saying exactly the right thing at exactly the right time. He was a genius in his own right and there was no taking it away from him. To watch him turn on his charm was like watching a work of art. He could do it whenever and to whomever he pleased.

I first met Pancho Sanchez in a little cafe in Greenwich Village just after the war ended in 1945. He was supposed to be a waiter but most of the time he would just sit in a booth at one end of the place and play his guitar to the amusement of the customers who patronized the place regularly or for those who visited it just out of curiosity. "The Old Mexico" the place was called.

I used to take friends to see Pancho occasionally from time to time when I resided in New York City. Always they came away impressed. I remember once when I was alone, I watched Pancho exercise his gift.

A young man, a Mexican like Pancho was attempting to sell souvenirs to a young woman tourist and was having very poor results. Pancho watched for while, then he took two earrings from a cigar box next to where he sat and walked over to the group.

"Allow me," he said to the young man and moved him gently aside. "This rubbish which he is trying to sell you, my dear, is not even worthy of this place. Please forgive him. Here is what he should be selling." It was then that Pancho displayed the earrings. For the first time in the whole transaction the woman's face shown with interest.

"You, no doubt, know what a truly great craftsman the Mexican Silver-smith is, acquiring his skill from the Aztec Indian and the Spanish conquistadors. Well, my dear, here is an exceptional example of his genius. Two very splendid earrings. Delicate masterpieces, they are. Fit for a queen and they are yours for just five dollars, madam."

She bought them. Pancho's charm had once again won out.

Pancho went back to Mexico in 1950 but before he left, he was involved in a very strange and singular incident. The spring of 1949 saw it happen, and it took place down in Greenwich. The mobs were being cleaned up and many of those who are known in underworld argot as "stool pigeons," were seeking refuge in Greenwich.

One "Slip" Kelly was a member of the above designated group and was holing up at a place called "Mortimer's".

It was early morning when the mob got Kelly. Sanchez just going home and as he crossed the street the sound of pistol fire broke the morning silence. Pancho found himself in the midst of a gun battle before he knew what had happen. Now Pancho is not too smart when it comes to situations such as he found himself in at that moment. He just stood as though frozen in his tracks. The gun battle continued and Pancho stayed to watch. Suddenly a man sprang from the door of "Mortimer's". In his hand was a smoking gun and, as he ran out of the bar, a car came speeding into the square, presumably to pick up the fleeing gunman. He had not seen Pancho when he came from the building but now as he fled he almost ran him into the sidewalk. This is where the mystery that has for sometime troubled me comes in. Pancho did not move, he said something to the gunman whereupon the gunman reached in his pocket and gave Pancho something, I guessed it was money, although I did not at that time find out. The question that has always confronted me whenever I think of this, is why didn't the gunman shoot Pancho? Here was an eye witness who could put the finger on him any time, and he could have shot him just as easy with no one being the wiser. But so it goes and by some act of mercy Pancho was spared.

It was a year later that Pancho went back to Mexico. I thought that that would be the last I would ever see of the little man but fate would not have it so. Last winter I was in Monterey. One evening as I wandered home to my hotel room, I chanced to pass through a section of the city known as the home of the cafes. This is a section of the city where the cafes are lined up on both sides of the street to great length. The soft flow of guitar music drifted from one of them and to me it sounded like that of the little Mexican whom I had known in Greenwich Village years before.

It was Pancho. He had not aged a bit and he still played the same soft kind of music. It was a little trouble for him to recognize me, however, as I had not been quite as well preserved as had he. As soon as he remembered who I was though, he could recall the details exactly. Soon we were drinking and talking of old times, and it was then that the memories of his episode in the square was brought back to me. I did not know whether to question him about it or to let it ride, because back in New York he had been very quiet about it, and never would answer questions concerning it. This I decided, would probably be the last time I would see Pancho, so I put the question to him. "Pancho", I said after a while, "Do you remember the night in the square when you were almost shot?"

He looked at me quizzically for a moment then turned back to his drink and said, "Yes, Amigo, I remember, I remember quite well."

"Did you ever tell anyone how it was that you were not killed on that spot right then?" I asked.

"Ah, no, my friend, for if I had it would have been in the papers and he would have come back and killed me."

"Because you saw him?" I said.

"Yes, but it was mostly because he was in a hurry and just plain didn't shoot me," he said with a smile.

"Come now," I said, "Surely he would have had time for one more bullet if he had wanted to, was he a friend of yours?"

"No, he was not, I had never seen him before that time."

"Well then, what was it you said to him?" I asked.

"Not much," he said, "I heard the shots and saw him come running. I knew that if I ran he would shoot me. I was so close he could not have missed, so I just stood there trusting my luck. He nearly ran right over me, but I stood there."

"What did you say to him, Pancho?" I almost shouted.

"Because I have a gift for such things, Senor, I knew just what to say," he said.

"Pancho," I said, "What was it you said?"

"Can you spare a few cents for a blind man? And you know, Senor, he gave me fifty cents."

AND HE SAID UNTO HER "COME"

Debbie Koscubannia's tiny frail figure looked lost in the big, old-fashioned four-posted bed in which she lay. The summer breeze from an open window blew a loose piece of faded wallpaper softly back and forth. Her eyes followed its motion, yet not seeing it. Now at the age of fourteen the doctors reported there was little chance of her recovery from the malady which had attacked her so suddenly. The decision was not final, of course. There were to be more tiresome, tedious hours of examination; then one blunt sentence which would be the turning point, the juncture in her life.

Debbie's eyes now rested upon a large picture hanging on the wall. How well she recalled the day her plump, cheerful other had presented it to her with a glow of unconcealed joy upon her face.

"Oh, Mom!" she had cried. "You shouldn't buy me anything. You know we can't afford—"

"Hush," she had answered softly but firmly. "I just happened to stop off at the Higgin's barn sale down the street. As I was ready to leave I saw this beautiful picture, thrown in a lump of old soap and books. I truly don't think my conscience would have allowed me to walk away without it," she added with a tinkling laugh.

Debbie sighed and murmured an oft repeated thankful prayer. The twenty-five by twenty gold-painted frame enclosed an inspiring painting of Jesus Christ sitting on a bench in a flower garden. His feet rested on the lush, carpet-green grass, so much different from the dusty roads of Galilee which he had trod. Surrounding Him were a variety of attractive flowers, displaying the glory of God's beauty in its fullest. And best of all three young children were gathered around Him; listening intently as He told them of His love and of the Kingdom.

On Jesus lap sat the younger sister, pointing to His scarred hand and asking in child like curiosity, "What happened to Your hand?"

Debbie liked to give the answer to that question herself. She liked the peaceful, quiet feeling which she experienced when she gazed at the picture. In a few days she found herself wondering about this Man. What was He like? No, what is He like? How did He live? The appearance of Mrs.

Koscubannia interrupted her thoughts.

"Mom," Debbie asked hesitantly, "where is our old family Bible?"

A puzzled look crossed Mrs. Koscubannia's face. Then her glance fell upon the painting and an understanding smile replaced her puzzled expression. In a few moments she returned, laboriously dusting the old black Book, and handed it to her daughter.

From that day on a familiar sight in the Koscubannia household to any visitor was a motionless figure deeply involved in a book, the Bible. Perhaps they wondered why she didn't read light love stories, which seemed to be so popular among the teenagers, or thrilling mystery murder stories to pass away the long lonely hours. She wished fervently that she could tell all teenagers and all adults exactly why. If only they too would give the Bible at least a try, they might surprise themselves and discover that the tales of kings and rulers, tender love stories, blood curdling murders and mysteries to be solved are unequal to any they had read or would ever encounter.

Even though Debbie could not satisfy that deep, longing desire within her, she influenced her family and friends immeasurably. It was now the family custom to gather around the battered old bed for an evening Bible story. Soon neighbors stopped by to listen humbly to this brave little invalid miss. They learned of the many incidents in Jesus' life, such as His temptations, the miracles He performed, and His great teachings. They began to believe in Jesus and seek daily strength and forgiveness through Him. The lives of Biblical persons unfolded before their eyes, revealing mysteries of their own hearts; imperfections in their own characters and personalities. The neighbors would reluctantly leave each evening carrying with them a new thought or verse to guide them more steadily through the trials and temptations of the following day.

Debbie awoke from a fitful dream Tuesday morning just as the sun peered over the roof of the house next door and flooded her room with warm, friendly sunshine. For a moment she tried to determine the cause of the turmoil within her. She caught her breath sharply as she remembered that this was the day Dr. Hommus had promised to visit her and give the results of the examinations she had been subject to the preceding week.

One of the duties which seems to a doctor most difficult to fulfill is that of facing a person or family with hope, trust and expectancy evident in their every movement only to dash those hopes with the boulder of life called reality. Yet this was the only turn Dr. Hommus could take that Tuesday morning. He could only offer Debbie one flickering match in her new world of darkness. In a series of three or four major operations there was a slight possibility of her recovery. There would be many more months of pain, expense, tests, examinations and even then, possible failure. It was her decision and hers alone.

The bright sunlight in Debbie's room seemed only to reflect the agonizing truth of Dr. Hommus' words. The tension, fears and constant pain of the past months numbed her brain and she only nodded, unspeaking until they left her alone. Only then did her body tremble and shake with the sobs of a despairing heart. Debbie turned her head toward the painting and through blinded eyes she murmured, "Oh Jesus, if only You were here."

Wait! He seemed to be moving. Yes, He was! Suddenly Jesus was in the room standing beside her bed and looking upon her with great compassion in His eyes. And He said unto her—"Come." Debbie rose from her bed and they walked out of the house together into the sunshine.

As they walked slowly down the busy street, they noticed a sign boldly advertising "Ben's Bar". The sound of loud voices, thick from an over abundance of liquor reached their ears. Two men were discussing which wife would nag the most when they returned home. A newsboy called out. "Extra! Extra! read all about it. Five guards murdered in prison riot. Worst riot in history of state, governor declares." Debbie heard a heavy, discouraged sigh escape from His lips and His eyes were filled with a greater pity than she had ever beheld. Only He and His Father could know the destiny of these people who were so stupid in sin.

Just ahead of them, a great crowd was pushing and shoving, yelling angry threats back and forth to each other. A man was standing on a wobbly platform fashioned from orange crates preaching that he was God, that he alone was to be worshipped. Jesus quickened His steps until they were out of hearing. If only they could learn the truth. If only someone would tell them the truth!

Turning the corner the signpost read "Roosevelt Promenade." Large well-kept buildings with spacious lawns and fancy shutters lined both sides of the street. Neatly trimmed hedges and freshly-painted fences separated each house as if one family wished not to associate with its neighbor. Nursemaids in white starched uniforms were strolling the sidewalks with cute little babies whose mothers were too busy to be bothered with them.

Jesus whispered, "Oh, Father, forgive these people. Send someone to help them find the Paths of Righteousness."

Walking on and on they came to the slums. Rickety, old drab houses leaned against each other for support, tired of the sorrow, ignorance and poverty they had held for more than a century. Children played along the filthy trash-filled streets, screaming curse-words to each other because it was all they knew; it was all they ever heard.

Just then a police car roared past with its siren screeching to the world that someone had broken a law.

"How noisy the world would be if a siren blew everytime one of us disobeyed one of God's laws," Debbie thought sadly.

"My Father, My Father, forgive these wretched people for they know not how to live!" Jesus cried. "Send someone to guard them from Satan's evil power that they may someday be with Me in Paradise."

Debbie opened her eyes with a start. Someone next door had slammed the cover on a garbage can. She looked around expecting to see Jesus standing beside her bed. Yes, He was there! He was sitting on a bench in a beautiful flower garden with three young children gathered around Him.

Mrs. Koscubannia entered the room. A strange sadness deepened the lines in her face.

"Mother, I'm going to walk again." Debbie whispered softly.

"TOO LATE"

It was raining again. To John Mason it seemed to rain continually without any sign of ceasing. He turned up the frayed collar of his coat against the cold and tried to remember when he had last seen the sun. His head whirled as the memories returned. He thought of Bermuda with its sunny beaches and starlit nights and he recalled his honeymoon and the happy hours there with Jane. He felt sick with longing as he pictured her again. She had been dead ten years now, or was it eleven? It could be even more for he had not kept track or time. He could only remember the day he had been called to the warden's office. Jane had died of shock shortly after he had been imprisoned.

He fought to stop the past from returning and raised his head into the rain. Ahead were the lights of a shabby diner. How long it had been since he had eaten? Somewhere in the night were the noises of the people living in the delapidated apartment buildings. A wife yelling at her husband, a child crying, and other noises that echoed through the cluttered alleys. The memories returned and his thoughts wandered to the trial. He remembered the headlines screaming of a young lawyer's dishonesty. Life had been full before that and the future had looked even brighter. Then came the bombshell. He was accused of embezzling more than one hundred thousand dollars in company funds. Everything was against him. He had ready access to the Fullbright & Laughton Law Firm. The books were also available to him and they had obviously been tampered with in an effort to cover up the crime. He had spent many hours working late at the firm alone and he was held responsible.

The trial was quick and was followed by a sentence of ten to twenty years. After eleven years he was released but ruined and he looked to the bottle for consolation. Now he walked slowly through the slums in hope of finding a meal somehow. A pain in the pit of his stomach now added to the constant pain across his chest and he decided to find a place to rest. It was still raining when he sat down on a vacant stoop. The pain was sharper now and he closed his eyes as if to shut it out. If he could only see the sun. This thought brought a smile to his lips. How stupid could he be? It was night and he couldn't even see the stars. With this thought he fell asleep.

In the morning a bright sun was shining down on the stoop where John Mason lay. A look of peace and contentment was on his face. Not even the yelling of a newspaper boy awakened him as he shouted, "Extra! Extra! John Mason cleared in Embezzlement case!" The article went on to say that the firm's bookkeeper had been caught in absconding with more funds and had confessed to the first crime. It told of efforts being made to find the lawyer who had been missing since his release from prison but, as yet, no trace of him could be found.

THE REASON WHY

He died because someone must die.
Whenever wars are fought.
Because in war someone must lie,
And bleed in pain and rot.

Ask him for the reason why,
Ask any of his sort.
They will not tell you, but they might,
If dead men could but talk.

SCHOOL DAZE

Oh, June of 1957,
I hope you'll soon be here.
I'm tired of education,
For I've studied many a year.

In math I've worked to solve for X,
Or maybe Y or Z,
Though what can be the use of it
Is more than I can see.

In French I've tried to "parlez-vous".
Mistakes made my face red.
A Frenchman would be mystified
To know what I have said.

Those essay questions in hist'ry
Were really my great despair.
I've thought and thought and writ
and writ,
But much of it's been "hot air".

My English I thought was easy.
It never caused me much fright
Till during my vacation
A poem I had to write.

When it's June of '57,
And I think I'm through with knowledge,
I'll find it's futile after all,
For I must go to college.

JUST LIKE A MAN!

Quote: "A man may work from sun to sun, But a woman's work is never done."

Up at dawn to do the mopping
Hurry home — from my shopping.
Dust the tables, lamps and chairs.
Lightly scrub the cellar stairs.
Make the beds and shake the rugs.
Flit the crevices for bugs.
Plan a menu. Start the meal—
Always those darn vegetables to peel!
Set the table and — oh, yes!
Not to mention bathe and dress.
I dare you, husband dear, again to say,

"What'd you do today?"

Carol Moffett '56

COMPLAINT

Ah, that I could take a thought
And hold it in my hand
And turn it into shining words!
No one can understand
The aching of this heart in me
Because it cannot build
With simple, common well-used words
A poem! Learned and skilled
In the art of making verse
Though I'm supposed to be,
Can no one teach me how to turn
Verse into poetry?

OH, SWEET LIFE

Alas, this grim portray of life,
Of dull routine and mortal strife
Has ceased.
It will no longer be.
The man is dead, his soul set free.

But he has not yet found the peace,
With which his death he hoped to lease.

For he, poor man, was led astray,
They save for him, another day.

He will be born to live again,
To earth, this poor man they'll send.
He'll moan and groan and sigh and cry,

For it doesn't pay to ever die.

SNOW

The snow is falling through the air,
Among the trees and everywhere;
Covering roads and creeks and lanes,
And peeking in the windowpanes.

It trims the gray fence rails in frills
Turns the haystacks into fleecy hills,
Gives all the posts round woolly caps
And fields white aprons for their laps.

Patsy got stuck with David (in knickers) for the spring Pro efforts to get out of the date, helped by Sally, only got her into big trouble with Carol, Jim, Joyce, and Dick. Brothers Bob and Rich, and their girl friends, Peggy and Pril, didn't help the situation any by teasing Pat and Dave, who, in desperation, began to search for a pair of long pants. Little Betty confused the problem further by delivering Carol and Jim's love-letters all over town. Finally, after much difficulty, everything was straightened out to a logical conclusion.

Front Row—G. Plummer, J. Timberlake, K. Kozak, B. Morton, N. Foster, C. Merrill, B. Moorehead, S. Hicks, J. Seely, L. Gatchell, A. Colby.

Second Row—S. Gordon, W. Kennagh, W. Bryant, P. Welch, A. Knight, H. Foster, B. Day, B. Whitley, R. Huotari, E. Swett, J. Welch.

Coach Gouin started the season off with only nine main stays on the team. But as the season developed he had a team which was in better condition than those of the two previous years. Injuries were few and the boys really had the spirit and ability which we haven't had in the past years. Paris although having a light team did a very fine job.

The boys who were on the first team deserve most of the credit for our wins as Coach Gouin had little opportunity to substitute. These boys were: Leslie Gatchell, Bruce Day, James Seely, Billy Morton, Gard Plummer, Alden Colby, Edward Swett, Norman Foster, Bob Whitley, Raymond Huotari, and Stephen Hicks.

Paris 21—Bridgton 9

Paris jumped to an early lead to defeat Bridgton 21-9. Whitley showed very good early season form and scored two of the Paris touchdowns on intercepted passes. One of these was a 95 yard return. Seely then cracked over from the 15 to complete the Paris scoring.

Paris 7—Norway 6

Paris playing again for the second year in a row in the rain won a 7-6 victory over our twin town rival, Norway. A long pass from Seely to Whitley took the ball to the five. Seely then plunged over for the T.D. and Whitley made it 7 to nothing with his conversion. The only Norway score came when Frechette drove off his right tackle for the score.

Paris 7—Gould 6

Paris chalked up its third consecutive win by defeating Gould Academy of Bethel 7-6. Day made the play of the year by plunging through the center of the line and then ran down the field for 64 yards. Huotari taking over for his first full game at quarterback passed to Seely who made a beautiful catch for the final point.

Jay 34—Paris 0

Paris suffered their first defeat of the season to Jay High. Paris having one of their poorer games of the season were never close to the scoring. Plummer played an outstanding defensive game for Paris as he recovered three fumbles along with some beautiful tackling. The Jay attack was led by Boivin who scored three of their five touchdowns.

Mexico 27—Paris 0

Paris playing a very snappy and large school were defeated by Mexico 27-0. Paris played a very fine game but the Mexico team was much stronger. George Cricross proved the scoring punch for Mexico with two of the Pinto touchdowns.

Paris 6—Livermore 6

Paris pulled out of their scoring slump by tying Livermore in our next to the last game. The Livermore Andies were outclassed by a smooth running Paris team who scored three touchdowns. Two of the touchdowns were called back on account of penalties. Gatchell showed good mid-season form in racing for three of the Paris T.D.'s.

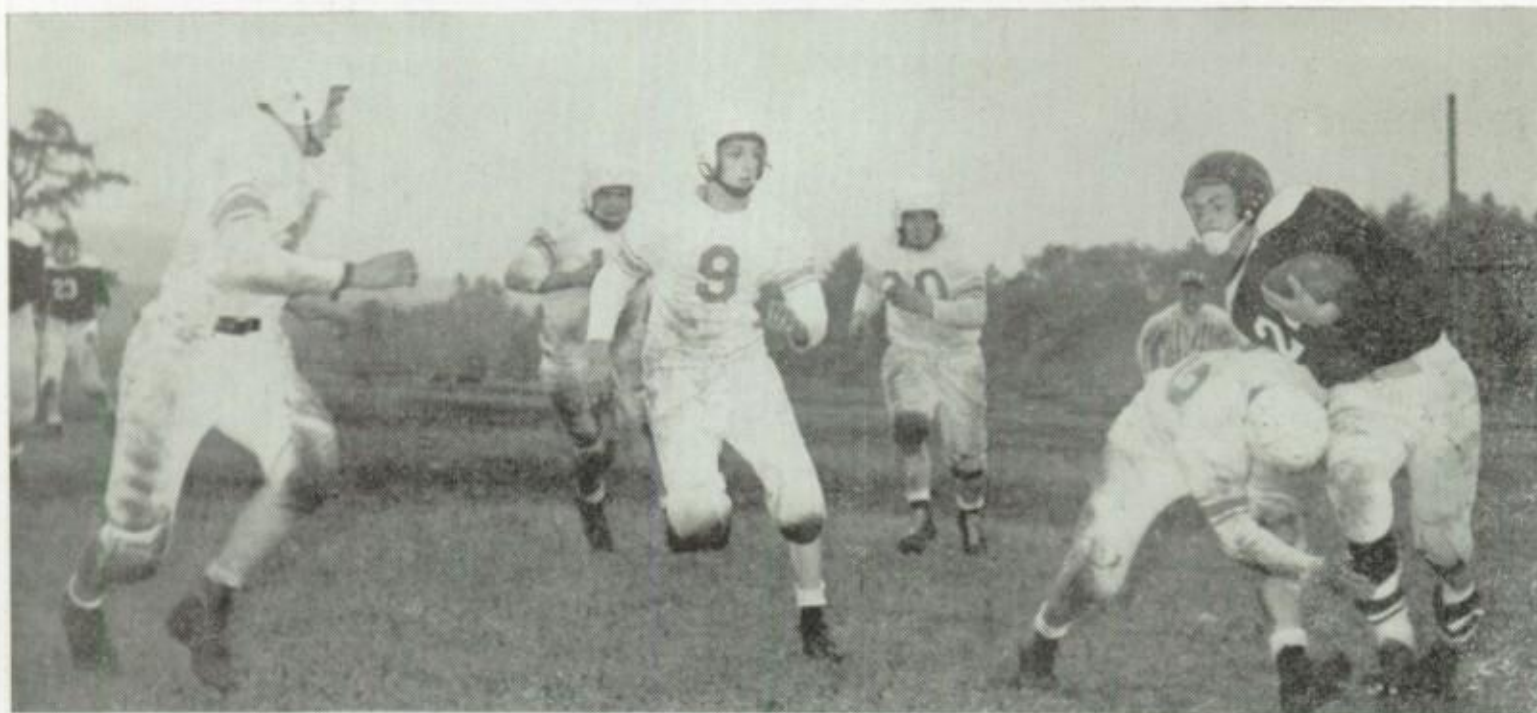

Paris 6—Norway 6

Paris again was unable to defeat their rivals Norway in the last game of the year. Penalties nullified the Paris extra point and many long runs which would have given us a victory. The boys showed good sportsmanship and played a fine game.

 Third Row—D. Hall, J. King, R. Moorehead.

Paris High had a winning season this year, winding up with 15 wins as against 7 losses. Despite those losses, Paris was one of the strongest Class M teams in Western Maine. Three of the losses were in succession, as Paris hit a slump.

After ending in a tie, Paris played Bridgton for the Western Division championship of the Sun-Journal League. Paris also took the Regional tournament by defeating Bridgton and Mechanic Falls. The local five suffered a defeat, however, in the Western Maine Semi-Finals by Jay High, who also defeated Paris for the Sun-Journal cup.

There were no losses due to injury, but John King was absent for two weeks and Merrill was lost at mid-season.

Although the Varsity will have lost six Seniors, next year looks very promising. Good luck, boys.

Round Robin

In the annual Round Robin, which gives a preview of the coming year, South Paris rolled up three wins and one tie, thus taking the honors. The home town boys licked Bridgton 20 to 6, Norway 17 to 2, Mexico 14 to 6, and tied with Gould 9 to 9. This display gave the Paris fans a bright outlook for the coming season.

Paris 57—Norway 44

Paris opened its defense of the Sun-Journal League title by trouncing Norway High. Leading all the way by a comfortable margin, Paris cleaned the bench and used twelve men. Big John King dunked twelve points from in close and Jim Seely sailed twelve points through the hoop from his guard position.

Paris 49—Gould 48

Paris High squeezed by Gould Academy after losing a four point half-time lead. It was a see-saw battle the first half with Seely tossing in the winning basket. Seely (13), King (12), and Huotari (11) led the way for Paris, while Knight (22) led Gould.

Paris 64—Mexico 51

After breaking a 12 to 12 first period deadlock, Paris raced on to down Mexico by thirteen points. Seely led with twenty points, while Edwards and Merrill had sixteen apiece.

Paris 47—Lisbon 58

Paris met their first defeat at the hands of a strong Lisbon five. After leading the first half, Paris fell behind, the loss of four starters on fouls the last quarter being a big factor leading to defeat. Seely (13) and Huotari (12) led Paris with Kinney being the high man for Lisbon.

Paris 63—Freeport 87

Again the defending Western Maine champs went down in defeat. It was strictly an offensive game as two Freeport men hit the thirty point mark. Seely and Huotari were the high men for the Cardinals.

Paris 58—Windham 63

Paris plunged to their third straight loss. Windham took the game from Paris, the game being held in our Junior High Gym. Seely led the scoring parade with twenty points.

Paris 61—Mexico 25

Paris went to town on Mexico to end a three game losing streak. Pulling out in front at the start, Paris continued stretching the lead. Merrill (16), Day (12), and Edwards (11) led the way.

Paris 68—Bridgton 34

Paris played a fine defensive and offensive game to beat Bridgton. No Bridgton man hit double figures. Paris scoring was led by Huotari, Seely, and Merrill who all wound up with double digits. Day displayed his usual finesse throughout the game.

Paris 58—Lisbon 49

Cutting down Lisbon, Paris squared the season with the Greyhounds. Playing a hard, fine game, Paris really showed their power with Huotari pouring in 18 points. King and Merrill also hit double digits with 12 and 11 apiece respectively.

Paris 81—Freeport 63

Paris avenged Freeport's early victory by pulling away in the second half to win by eighteen points. Big John King (26) and Merrill (24) led the Paris scoring with Seely also in his usual fine form.

Paris 60—Bridgton 64

The Cards bowed to the Black Hawks on their home court in Bridgton by four points. This game left South Paris and Bridgton tied for first place in the Western Division of the Sun-Journal League. Seely, with 17, and Huotari, with 16, carried the load for Paris with Day also hitting the double digits.

Paris 76—Livermore 77

A last quarter rally by the Andies dumped the local boys by a single point. The loss of Seely and Day in the early part of the game was heavily felt. King (32) led the Cards in scoring, though he was fouled out in the final minutes of play.

Paris 71—Livermore 64

Paris spurted past Livermore in the last quarter to avenge the previous night's defeat. Seely led Paris to the victory by playing one of his best games. Handling the ball very well, he tossed in thirty points.

Paris 63—Norway 58

Paris gained a victory over their arch-rivals, Norway High, with all the Seniors being able to play a good portion of the game. Huotari (15) and King (13) led the scoring for the Cardinals, with Moorehead and Seely also in fine form.

Paris 63—Gould 44

Paris High rolled over Gould Academy to end in a tie for first place in the Western Division of the Sun-Journal League with Bridgton High. It was a team victory with Neit, Day, King, and Seely hitting double digits and Huotari falling just shy of the mark.

Paris 59—Bridgton 53

Coach Brigg's charges downed Bridgton in a play-off game to win the Western Division championship in the Sun-Journal League. King, Seely, and Huotari led the victors in scoring.

Preliminaries For Western Maine Class M Tournaments

Paris 54—Bridgton 43

Paris downed Bridgton again to get into the finals of the Region Four preliminaries. This gave three out of four against Bridgton for the year. Seely, King, and Day were the leading scorers.

Paris 64—Mechanic Falls 39

Paris High rolled to a berth in the Western Maine Tournaments by trouncing McFalls. It was Paris all the way with Ray Huotari and Jim Seely hitting for seventeen each.

Western Maine Tournaments In Lewiston

Paris 56—St. Ignatius 44

Paris High won over highly rated St. Ignatius of Sanford who were seeded fourth while Paris was seeded fifth. King poured in a big 25 with Huotari following with 15. Day had 9 and did a great rebounding job.

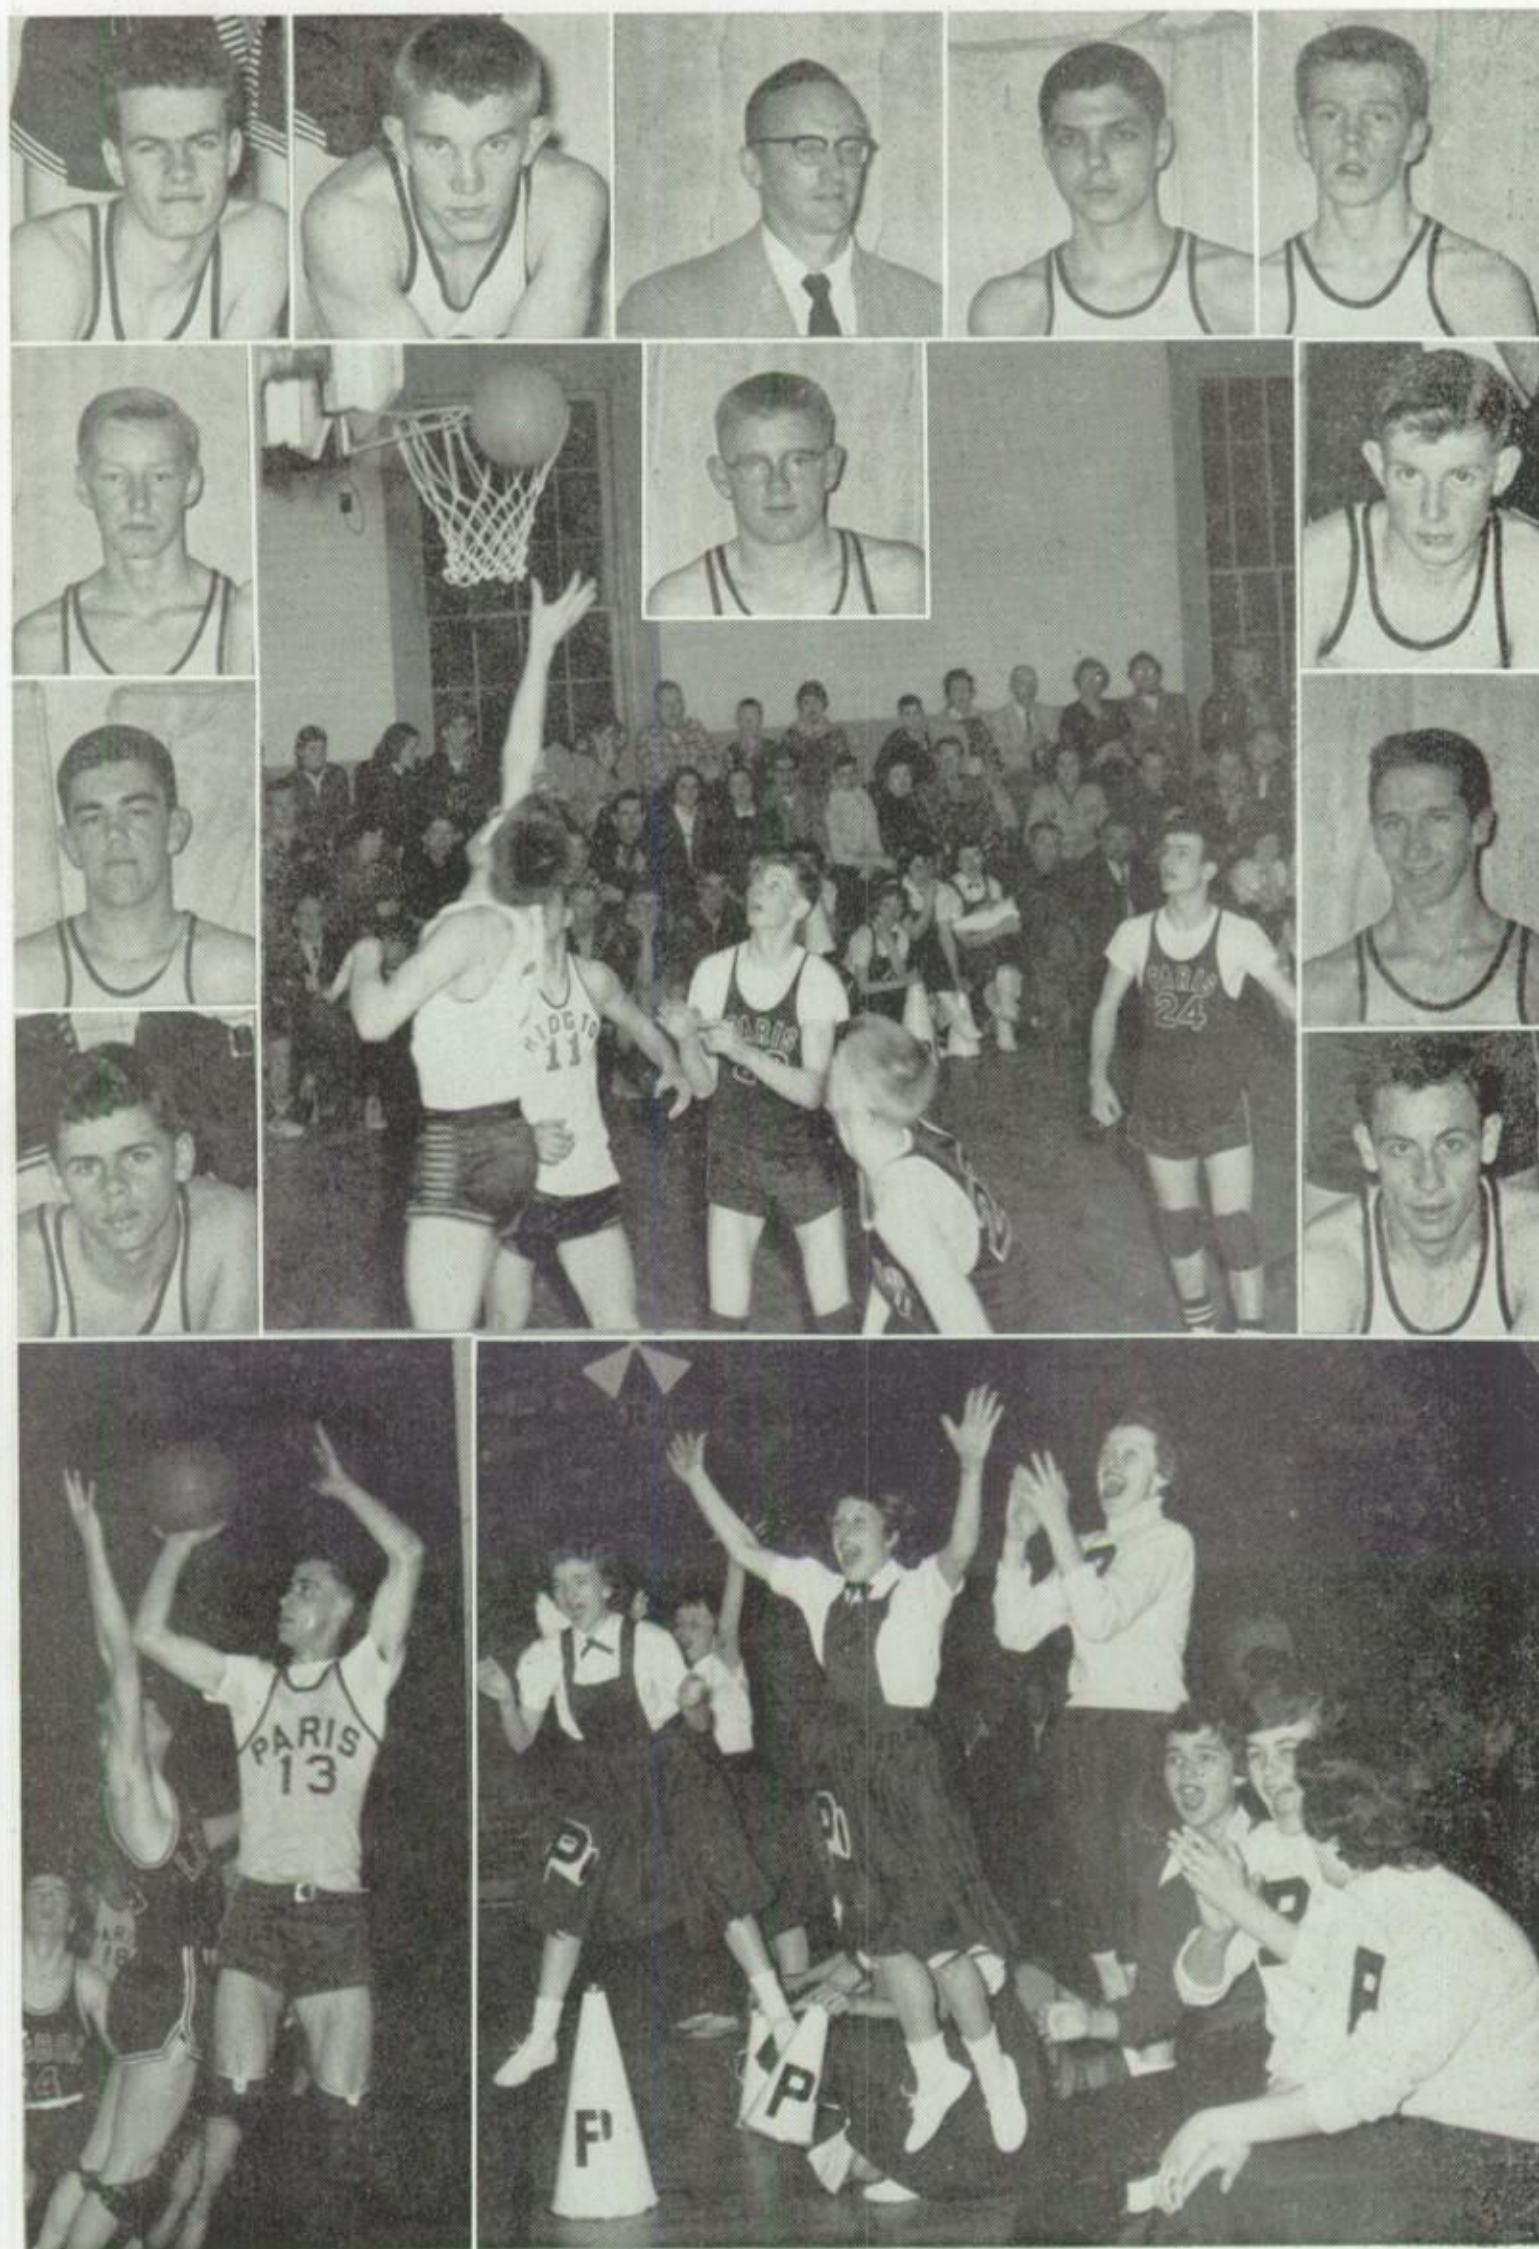

Paris 66—Jay 75

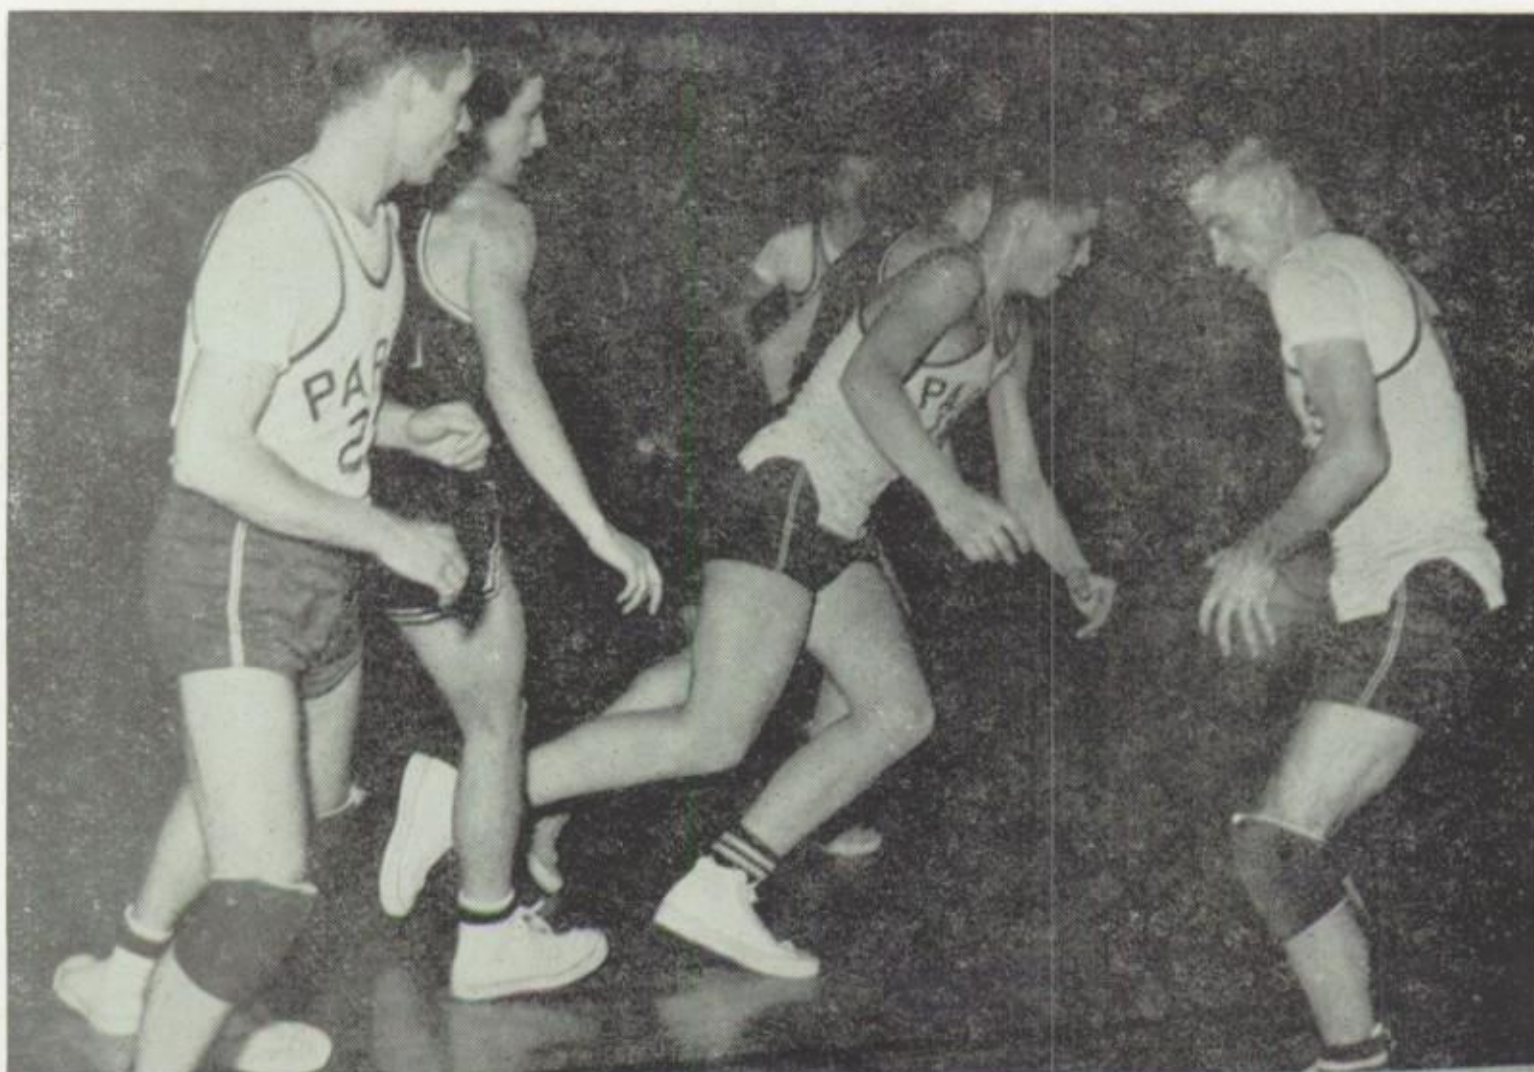

Jay High ousted defending champion Paris in a thrilling game in which the score was tied nine times and the lead changed hands eleven times. King (20), Edwards (15), and Day (14) led the Cards in scoring.

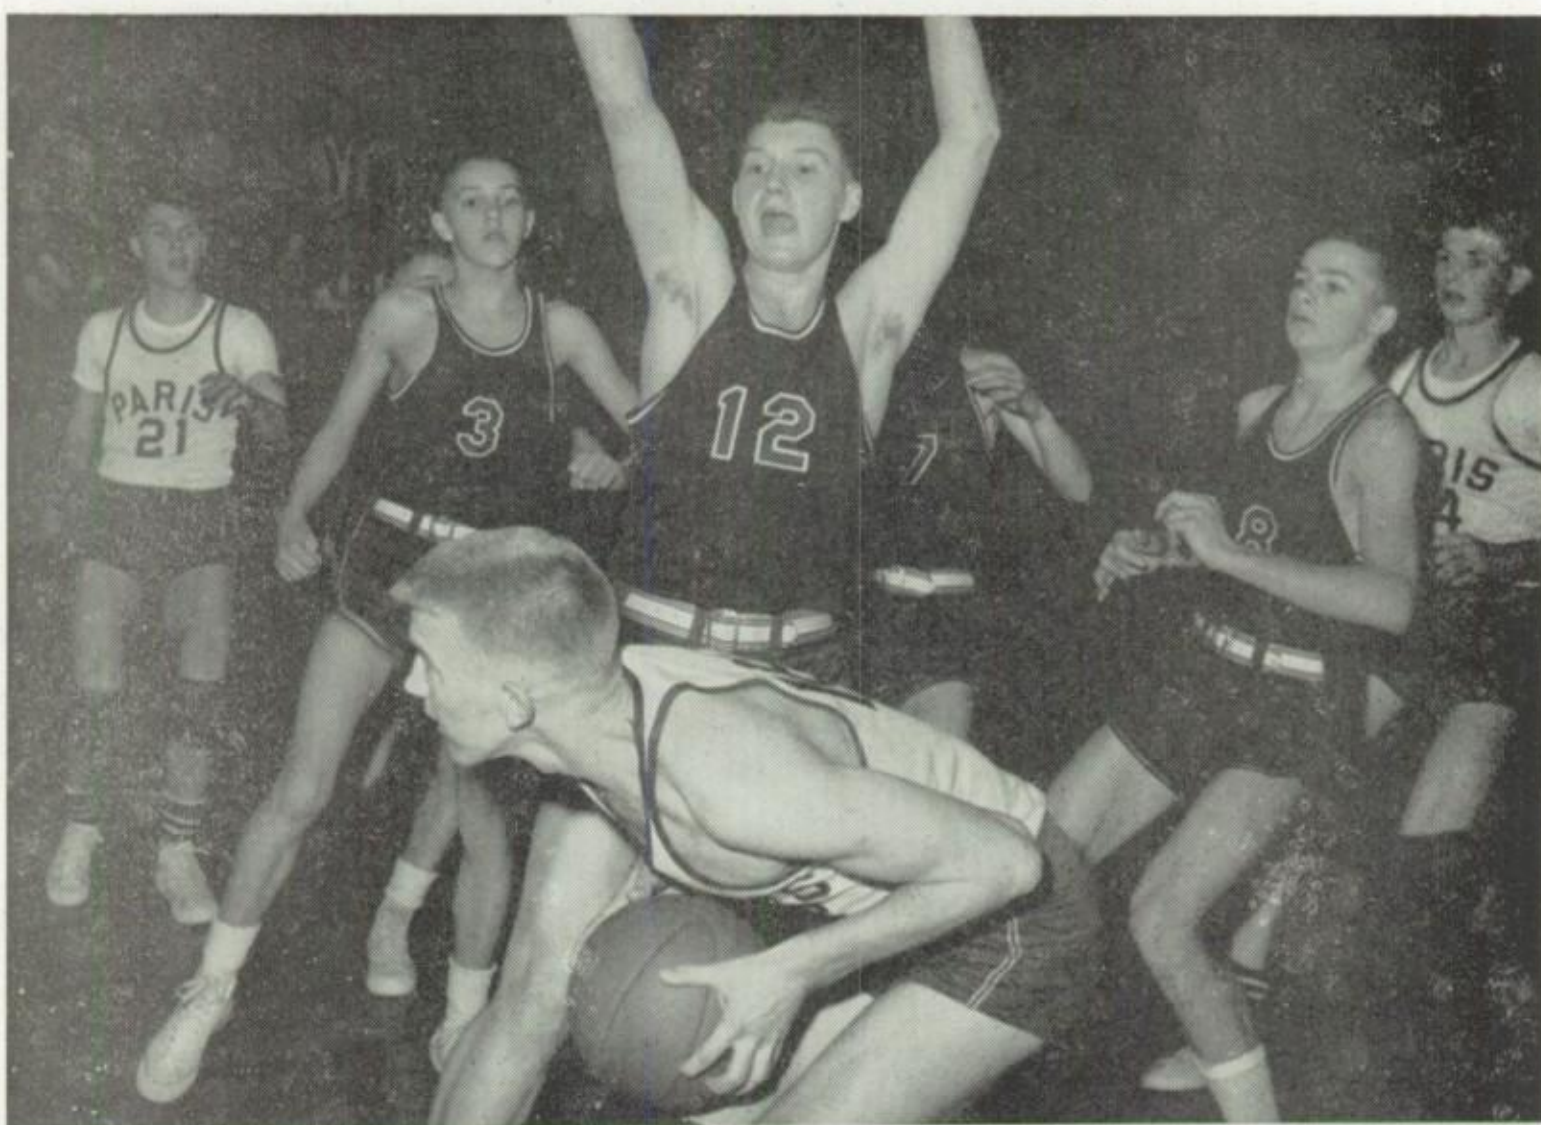

SUN-JOURNAL LEAGUE PLAY-OFF

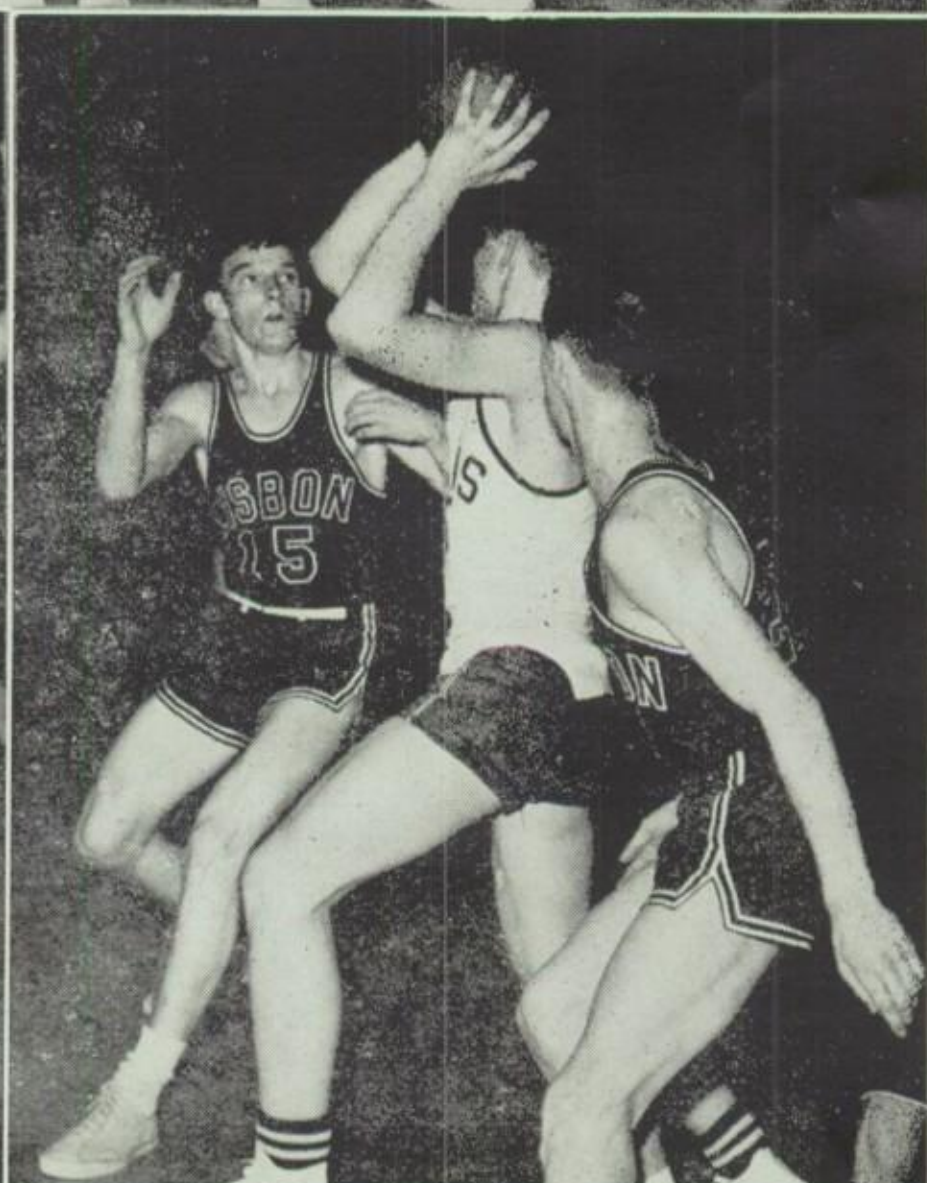

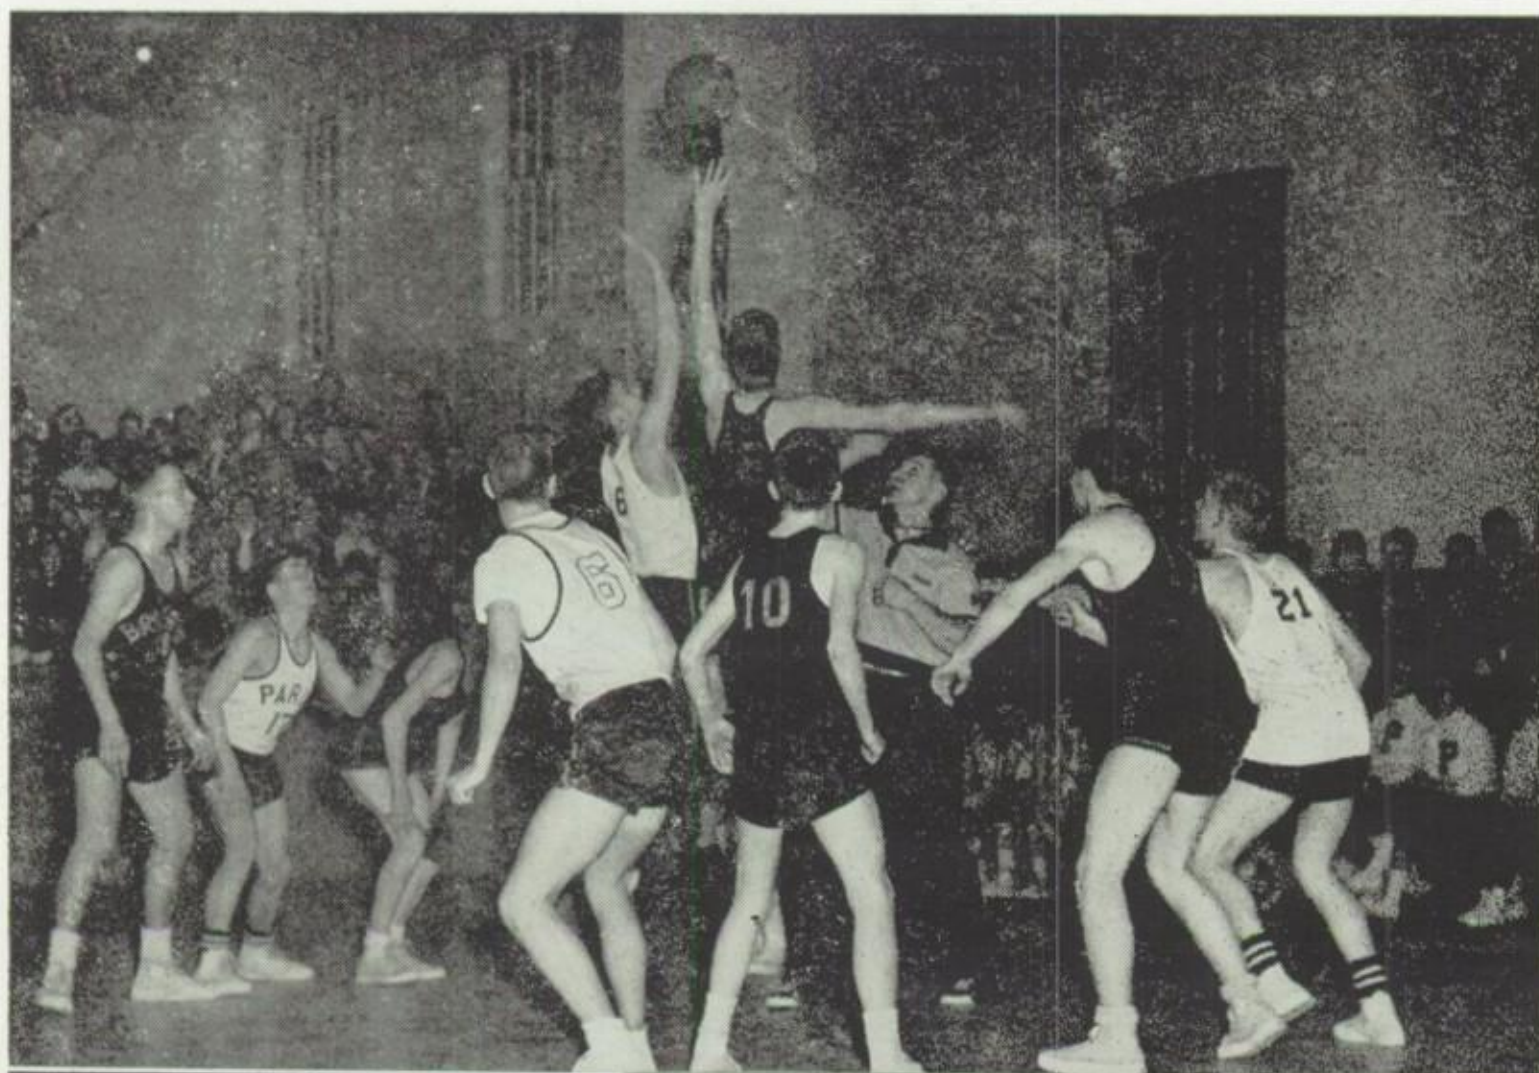

Paris 57—Jay 85

A below par Paris team went down in defeat at the hands of Jay, giving the Tigers the Sun-Journal title. Paris's three Senior "big guns" were under par physically as the percentages showed. King (18) and Huotari (16) led the Cardinals.

VARSITY CHEERLEADERS

Kneeling in Front—S. Harvey.

Standing—J. DeCato, P. Butterfield, H. King, M. Rideout, T. Viles.

The cheerleaders started practicing early in September to begin again to build up the school spirit of Paris High. Rallies were held before the football games to ensure the boys that the school was behind them all the way.

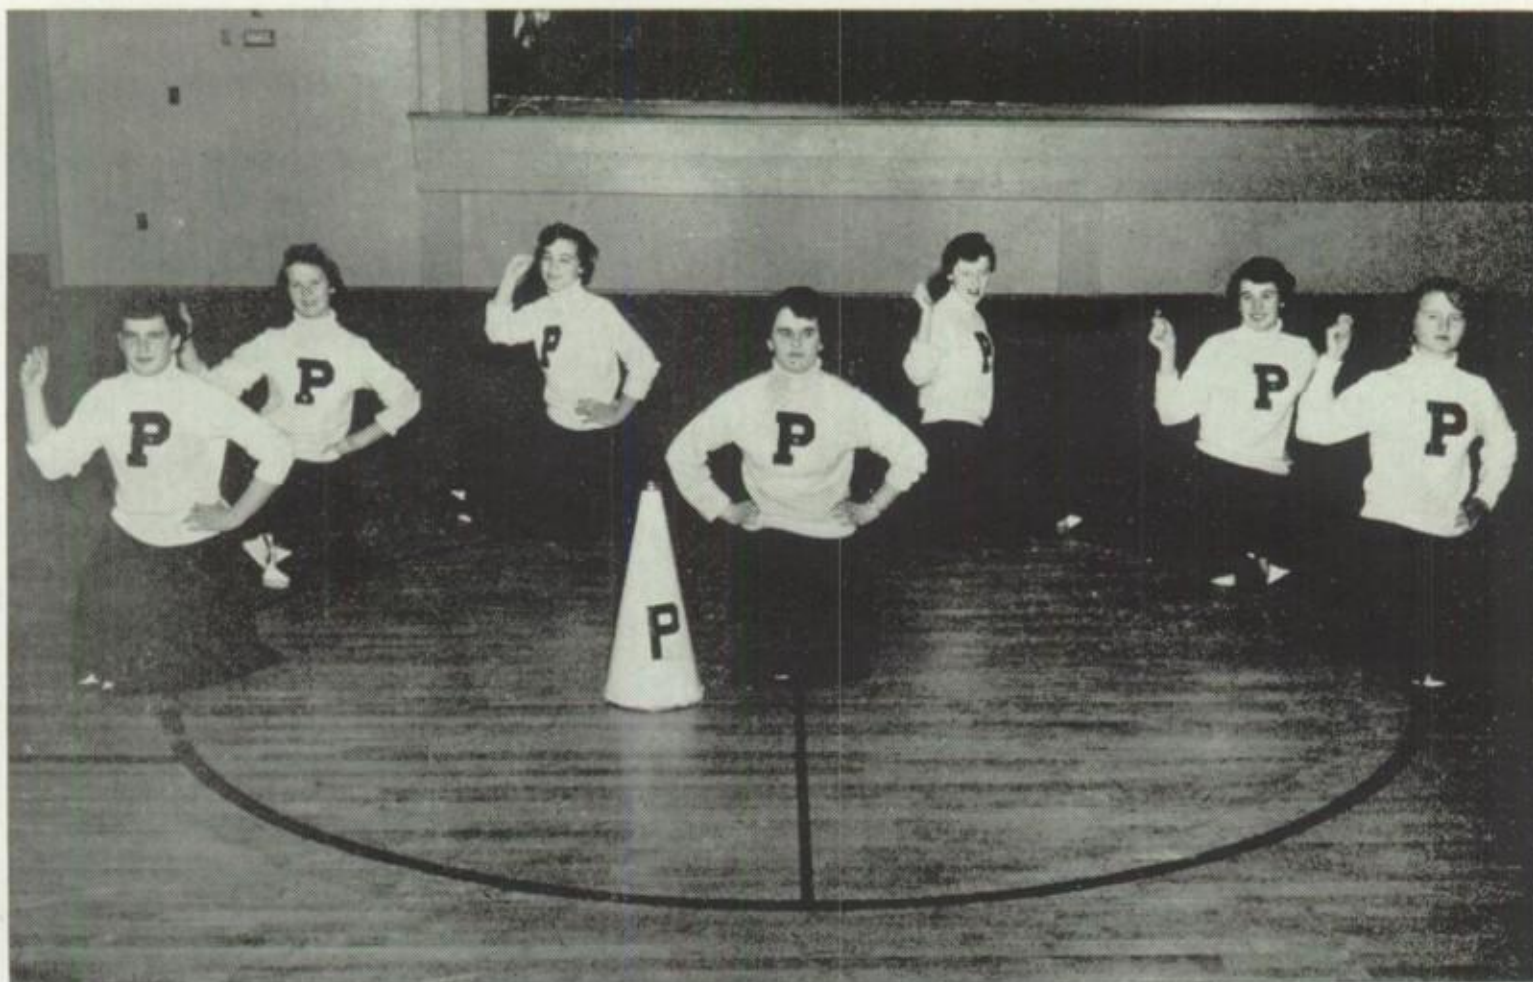

Thanks goes to Mrs. Sturtevant and Mrs. Viles for helping to change the basketball uniforms. Their efforts were certainly appreciated.

The veteran cheerleaders this year were Priscilla Swan, Priscilla Butterfield, and Sally Harvey, who was chosen as head cheerleader. Others were Helen King, Janice DeCato, and Tallie Viles. We lost Priscilla Swan during the football season, and the sub, Marilyn Rideout took her place as a regular.

The advisor was Mrs. Marjorie Jordan and much credit goes to her for her efforts and patience. She advised the cheerleaders in many ways and helped them with their new cheers.

The tournaments ended this year of cheerleading with all the cheerleaders doing their best.
